PRICE THREE CENTS.

U. & D. SHOPMEN SIGN UP AT WAGE CUT OF 7 CENTS AN HOUR

Estimated That 95 Per Cent of Striking Railroaders Have Signed New Agreement With Railroad—Thirty Signed Monday and Rest Today.

About 95 per cent of the striking shopmen of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad Monday and today signed a new working agreement which included a 7 cent-an-hour wage cut, and are returning to work in the railroad shops on the Strand.

From one of the union men it was learned today that on Monday thirty of the strikers had signed the agreement at the reduced wage scale and when the others learned that fact they decided that it would be best for them to sign up also. This morning another large number of strikers called at the railroad office at the shops on the Strand and signed applications to return to work.

Before the strike went into effect the shopmen at the Ulster & Delaware Railroad shops were receiving 77 cents an hour. Under the agreement now being signed they will receive 70 cents an hour.

The men who have not signed the agreement are understood to have secured jobs elsewhere and have been working for some time.

INSPECTOR HERE THIS AFTERNOON

Will Be At Rondout Station At 5 O'clock This Afternoon to Receive Suggestions as to New Location of the Sub-station.

This afternoon an inspector of the post office department will be at the Rondout sub-station at 5 o'clock to receive suggestions from those using that station in regard to the location of a new sub-station when the present lease expires. The inspector will also be at the sub-station in the evening until it closes to receive suggestions and will spend Wednesday in Kingston.

The lease on the Broadway location does not expire until next April. So far seven proposals have been received by the post office department for the new location. As stated in the Freeman Monday the majority of the downtown business men seem to favor the locating of the sub-station in the Mansion House building.

COLORED MEN FORM TEMPORARY ORGANIZATION.

The second meeting for the purpose of forming a colored organization, was held at the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church Monday night. After a brief statement Mr. Clark stated the purpose of the meeting and said that "we are ready to organize." Mr. Lowber said he felt confident at the beginning that the spirit of the organization could never be better and that every colored man will be a part of this great plan.

Henry Van Derzee suggested a name for the organization. His suggestion was deferred to be considered by a committee when formed.

Norman West said he was a great lover of his race and urged all the men to stick together.

H. Van Derzee then moved that we perfect an organization, which was seconded and the motion was carried.

Clarence Van Derzee stated that the officers of the organization should be carefully considered before elected or put in office, and that the officers be temporary until the next meeting. Mr. Lowber then moved that Mr. Clark be temporary chairman. Motion was carried. On motion, H. Van Derzee was elected secretary and W. Van Dyke, treasurer.

Mr. Clark said that the organization had much to achieve and while trying to perfect plans for the organization he wished to remind the men that the great bulk of colored women are anxiously awaiting its achievement and are stepping towards organization so as to be cemented with this body. It was then voted that the next meeting be held at the St. Mark's A. M. E. Church, Foxhall avenue, on Friday, October 6, at 8 p. m., to complete the organization.

The meeting was adjourned with a spirit of confidence in future plans.

Our Growing Population.

The following births have been reported to the health board:

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Albrecht, 52 Ravine street, a son Edward.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dowell, 27 O'Neill street, a son Sidney Fred.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. King, East Union street, a son Charles Monroe.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hornbeck, 33 Gill street, a daughter Albertina.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ewel, 108 Gage street, a daughter Lillian May.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion E. Sheelie, Lake Mohonk, at 11 Staples street, a son Eugene.

World Series Here.

The Kingston Colonials have arranged to have the world series games at the Kingston Fair Grounds on Saturday and Sunday. Admission will be free Saturday and it is expected that there will be a large attendance of fans that day. The usual admission will be charged for the Red Hook-Colonial game Sunday afternoon.

Has Secretarial Position.

Miss Marge Davitt, a graduate of the Moran Business School, Burgein building, has accepted an excellent secretarial position with Saddle Creek & Company, Inc., 273 Fair

MUDANIA PARLEY GETS UNDER WAY

By Telegram to The Freeman. Constantinople, Oct. 3.—Despite the severity of the Turkish conditions, hope ran high here today that the Mudania armistice conference would be successful in allaying the Near East war scare.

The negotiations were scheduled to begin at 11 o'clock with the Allied generals; Ismet Pasha, Kemal commander on the western front; Hamid Bey, Kemal envoy to Constantinople and Henri Franklin-Bouillon, "pacification emissary of the British, French and Italians," all participating.

An invitation was extended to the Greek commander in Thrace to participate but whether he accepted was not known at the time this despatch was written.

Musapha Kemal Pasha, commander in chief of the Turkish Nationalist armies, was detained at Angora, but it was said that he might reach Mudania before the armistice negotiations end.

EXAMINATIONS FOR NEW VOTERS

District Superintendent John U. Gillette, upon the recommendation of the commissioner of education, announces that he has designated Friday, October 6, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. and at such other times as will suit the convenience of the examiners, as a day where new voters may take an examination to be able to read and write English.

Places designated: State Normal School, New Paltz. Dr. John C. Bliss, principal. High School, Highland, A. O. Bridgman, principal. High School, Marlborough, David Taylor, principal. High School, Walkkill, Warren J. Gray, principal. School No. 13, Port Ewen, Mead Davis, principal.

EVEN MONEY EXPECTED BEFORE SERIES BEGINS.

By Telegram to The Freeman. New York, Oct. 3.—Although betting on the outcome of the world series between the Yanks and Giants has been noticeably light, it is expected that it will become more brisk within the ensuing 24 hours. Most of those speculatively inclined are waiting for even money and this price is expected to prevail before game time tomorrow.

Little advance betting has been reported at the McAlpin or the Waldorf-Astoria, although Chief Detective Joe Smith at the Waldorf has received some fair-sized commissions for wire and mail, most of them at even money. A. G. Denison, at the McAlpin, has several thousand dollars, no more, as stakes. Most of the betting has been made on single game returns.

H. H. Club Entertainment.

The Helping Hand Club will give an entertainment consisting of songs, recitations and readings Wednesday evening at the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church. The entertainment is under the auspices of the Good Will Society. Cake and ice cream on sale.

To See World Series.

Judge Schrick, Lou Brown, Ed Scherer, Matty Deagan, Art Rice and Jack Robins of the Kingston Colonials expect to take in the world series in New York city this week returning home in time for the Sunday game with the Red Hooks at the Kingston Fair Grounds.

At Bankers' Convention.

Attending the American Bankers' Association meeting in New York city representing the National Ulster County Bank are Charles Snyder, cashier, as delegate, and wife; Vivian F. Brennan bookkeeper, and wife; and LeRoy F. Port teller, and wife, as guests.

RUSH ON FOR EXPOSITION SPACE

Several Fine Children Enter Child Contest—Drawings For Space to be Held Friday.

More space was sold in the coming Kingston Exposition the last two days than in the whole week previous. As the large scope of the project is better realized and the unusual opportunity it affords for advertising and selling is appreciated, there is a rush to get in. Only three of the large middle space are left.

Mr. Treadwell, treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, who has taken three spaces for his firm—Everett & Treadwell and one for the Kingston Trust Co. of which he is a director—summed up the matter briefly when he said, "It is merely a question if any merchant, manufacturer, retailer or bank can afford to be absent from this cooperative project. Personally, I don't see how they can—particularly, when we are trying to make the receipts cover an industrial and promotional survey that will benefit, eventually, every business man and real estate owner here."

The general committee met Monday evening and confirmed contracts made for tents and decorations, and also authorized Wilson C. Ingalls to act as treasurer of the Exposition, representing the Finance Committee. Mr. Ingalls will appoint ticket sellers and collectors, take charge of and check the door receipts and audit and pay the bills contracted by the General Committee.

The exhibitors to date are:

No. Spaces	Exhibitor
3	Everett & Treadwell
1	Kattermann & Mitchell
1	Kingston Trust Co.

1	E. S. Craft & Son
1	E. Winter's Sons

The first entry to the Perfect Child Contest is Anna F. Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Chase of Witwyck avenue. The following are also entered:

Clarence Kaiser, 78 Pearl street. Tom and Ed McMillan, 32 Johnston avenue. Edith, Frank and Alfred Fuzeli, 162 Emerson street. Jack MacMillan, 137 Franklin street. George and Albert Hoffman, 120 Wilbur avenue.

The Pennington Studio has been appointed official photographer of the Exposition and will make sittings free to those children entering the Perfect Child Contest, who have no recent satisfactory photographs. Applications should be made to the Chamber of Commerce for this service.

The committee has set five o'clock next Friday afternoon as the time for the drawing which will decide the location of the space now subscribed. There are some very valuable places and those in this drawing will have the chance of getting them. All who sign before five o'clock Friday may draw and the rules governing will be published before that date. Afterwards subscribers will, of course, have to take spaces left.

Apple Tree Blossoms.

James E. O'Neill has an apple tree in blossom in the garden at the rear of his residence, 4 Crown street, from which he picked a large cluster this morning.

GRAND JURY MAKES REPORT

The grand jury, which has been in session for the past two weeks, reported to Judge Joseph M. Fowler, in Ulster county court this afternoon, handing up two sealed and nine open indictments, which with the indictment previously filed against Ralph Radcliffe Whitehead, Jr., and the Kelley brothers of St. Remy, gave a total of twelve indictments which were found by the grand jury.

The grand jury also dismissed five cases, with a recommendation in one case that a prosecution be had before a town magistrate.

In the consideration of the seven-teen cases considered by the grand jury, more than one hundred and fifty witnesses were examined.

The grand jury reported there were no other cases pending before them and were discharged by Judge Fowler with the thanks of the court for the expeditious manner in which they had discharged their duties.

Cases Dismissed.

District Attorney Traver reported that the grand jury had recommended dismissal of the complaint in five cases, and in such cases he moved the cancellation of the bond or discharge from custody of the defendant, which was granted.

The cases dismissed by the grand jury were as follows:

William Monroe, charged with burglary in the third degree at the town of Gardiner on August 5. Monroe is known as "Bad Bill" in Ulster county but in Dannemora prison and elsewhere he has proved a popular "trustee" with prison officials. One Canadian sheriff who had the custody of Monroe at one time became indignant when a demand was made by New York state officials to have him turned over to this state, because he said Monroe was the most useful man who had ever worked around the Canadian court house and jail.

George Kerbert, charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated in the town of Ulster on August 6. The grand jury recommended that a prosecution be had against Kerbert before some magistrate of the town for assault in the third degree.

John Mancuso, charged with assault in the second degree, on James Masten in this city on May 15.

Percy Jones, charged with assault in the second degree in the town of Hardenbergh on September 18.

Marcel C. Lewis, charged with grand larceny at the town of Wawarsing on September 5.

Two Women Indicted.

Defendants who were in custody were arraigned by District Attorney Traver as follows:

Viola Osterhout, charged with assault in the second degree, committed with a knife on Cecil Osterhout in this city on July 10. She pleaded not guilty and her case was sent to county court.

Mary Adams, charged with assault in the second degree, committed with a knife on Eleanor Taylor in the town of Ulster in July. Pleaded not guilty; case sent to county court. Both are negroesses.

Indicted For Robbery.

William Coons was arraigned on a charge of robbery in the first degree, in taking $35 from the person of Judge Worthy in this city on July 1, after an assault with a pistol. Coons pleaded not guilty and asked the court to assign him an attorney.

Indicted For Stealing Sugar.

John Collins was arraigned on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, in stealing 2,000 pounds of sugar belonging to Thomas Ward and E. E. Daw at the town of Esopus on August 20. The sugar was valued at $150.

Collins appeared by Thomas S. Coughlin and pleaded not guilty.

Hooch Peddlers Indicted.

Harry Moskowitz and Harry Halpern were arraigned on separate indictments, each charging the possession of intoxicating liquor in the town of Shandaken on September 2. They were arrested by the board of water supply police who found 116 small bottles and a few larger ones in the trunks with which they had made the trip from New York city.

Moskowitz and Halpern pleaded guilty and were fined $200 each which they paid.

More Liquor Cases.

Julius Stern, charged with possessing intoxicating liquor in the town of Marlbletown on July 28, appeared by Walter H. Miller and pleaded guilty. He was fined $200, which he paid.

John M. Krom, same charge, same place and date, was represented by V. B. Van Wagenen, pleaded guilty and was fined $200, which he paid.

Jerry Isoldi, charged with possessing intoxicating liquor in this city on May 13, pleaded guilty and paid a $200 fine.

Charles L. Mulford of Saugerties, indicted some time ago for possessing intoxicating liquor, pleaded guilty and paid a $200 fine.

Rural Letter Carriers Banquet.

The annual fall meeting and banquet of the Federation of Rural Letter Carriers of Ulster and Orange counties will be held at the Y. M. C. A. hall in Kingston Saturday evening, October 7. Speakers of note will be heard and an enjoyable evening is anticipated for Uncle Sam's messengers.

Classis of Ulster Meeting.

This afternoon the classis of Ulster is meeting in its first fall session, at the chapel of the First Reformed Church.

BROADER FOREIGN POLICY NEEDED, LAMONT TELLS BANKERS; "HANDS OFF" HARDING'S NEAR EAST COURSE

Morgan Partner Believes U. S. Should Sit In European Councils and Attacks High Tariff Theory—Administration Impatient With Those Who Would Embroil It In Europe's Near East Tangle.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 3.—America is at the parting of the ways and must meet the responsibility that comes with power or suffer loss of world leadership, in the opinion of Thomas W. Lamont, partner in J. P. Morgan & Company, whose address featured the first general session of the convention of the American Bankers' Association here today.

A co-operation that is not solely economic, but that is based upon sympathetic understanding of the problems and inspirations of other nations was bespoken by Lamont.

By indirection, Lamont put forth the belief that America must participate more actively in councils where Europe's affairs are discussed and its problems settled.

Lamont's speech was in effect the address of welcome to the 10,000 bankers assembled for the 48th annual convention of the association. The subject of his speech was "The American Banker's Responsibility Today."

Lamont declared that the question of German reparations was secondary to that of the larger question of inter-Allied indebtedness. The reparations question, he said, has not been settled but "public opinion on the other side has now advanced to a state where, when the reparations question comes up again next November, it ought not to be impossible to settle."

Regarding the indebtedness of foreign nations, Lamont expressed the frank belief that not all of it is collectible.

"Let us, by investigation, determine what if any of these debts are in any event uncollectible, and so should be written off in order to 'quit fooling ourselves,'" he said. "Let us decide what others of these debts are good in part, but must be given ample time to pay in—far longer perhaps than twenty-five years. Emphatically let us figure to see whether the payment of these debts (which inevitably must mean a great increase in our import and a heavy decrease in our export trade), is going to prove an asset or a liability for American business."

"I make no appeal to you for the immediate material aid of the world that lies beyond the Atlantic and the Pacific. I make appeal to you and to myself, for something far more rare—for the assurance to them that we are with them in mind and spirit in the solution of their difficulties."

"Do not forget," said Lamont, "that as the nations of Europe face great dangers, America too is facing a crisis, though of a different order. We have gained great power. With the power goes great responsibility. Have we discharged it? For the period of the World War my answer is yes, a thousandfold yes. For the period since the armistice, can anyone of us search his heart and answer yes. We have it true, offered criticism of the nations of Europe. We have shouted advice across to them. But we have been timid and fearful of petty entanglements. Now we have, it would seem, come to the parting of the ways. Shall we meet the responsibility that has come with our power—or shall we fail?"

There are several hurdles, Lamont said, that we must leap in our race for domestic prosperity. Among these he discussed the question of low prices for farm products, the problem of capital and labor and the question of politics and business.

"I think," he said, "that the low price hurdle is the easiest one to jump. The farmers had high prices in 1919 and 1920 but the aftermath was a serious one for them. In the long run they, like all of us, will fare better on a moderate price scale, with small fluctuations."

With regard to capital and labor, Lamont asserted that bankers must give every possible encouragement to the legitimate aspirations of labor. "There are still traces of arrogance among employers," he said, "as there are manifest signs of arrogance in labor. Yet the employer has far less excuse for arrogance than the laborer. The high wages of the war and of the years just after, had, not unnaturally, a somewhat 'spoiling' effect upon labor. They gave labor the feeling that it must always share in the prosperity—never in the adversity of business. I deplore that feeling, that feeling of labor, in so far as it was directed to the improvement of living conditions, to the gaining of a little leisure and of the time to play and be happy, was wholly right and to the advantage of the community."

An attack upon tariff making methods featured Lamont's discussion of politics and business.

"Many of our people," he declared, "still fail to realize that the word 'trade' means, in the final analysis, an exchange of goods or services. Many of us still cling to the idea that international trade, as the term applies to America, means that we can sell freely to all the markets of the world and, in turn, need buy from them little or nothing."

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Not only will the United States refuse to be "stamped" into a war in Asia Minor at the behest of organized church interests, but it is also determined that there will be no sword rattling by the American government that might be used to the diplomatic advantage of some European nations most concerned in the Turco-Grecian embroglio, it was emphatically asserted today by authorized spokesmen for the administration.

A definite campaign apparently is under way, it was said, to push America off the neutrality perch, and force this government either through diplomatic or military channels to align itself with one or another of the European political factions whose activities have contributed to the present situation in Asia Minor.

Thus far, it was stated, the United States has maintained its precarious perch and has done more than any other single nation to render disinterested relief work to alleviate the suffering of the unfortunate peoples concerned, and there is no intention of abandoning that policy for another.

It was marked with some impatience today by high government officials that most of the "insistence" for American intervention in the Turco-Grecian situation, comes from American churchmen abroad, whose work and activities have come directly under French and British influence which are striving for domination of southeastern Europe.

That President Harding's chief advisers do not consider the present situation in Asia Minor as anything distinctly new, but rather a fresh chapter of an old story, was clearly indicated today by the reply of Secretary Hughes to Bishop James Cannon's insistence upon American intervention.

Bishop Cannon, a Virginia churchman, cabled from London that "Almighty God would hold the United States government responsible for inaction while thousands are being murdered and deported."

After detailing what the American government has done, Secretary Hughes replied: "The executive has no authority to go beyond this and there has been no action by congress which would justify this government in an attempt by armed forces to pacify the Near East or to engage in acts of war to accomplish the results you desire with respect to the inhabitants of that territory and to determine the problems which have vexed Europe for generations."

It is the view of Secretary Hughes, Secretary Hoover and other members of the cabinet that the United States can best render aid by holding itself aloof and exerting a moral influence for settlement of these age-old problems. To intervene would mean that this government would have to support either French or British diplomacy in the bickering of south Europe and would lead to political complications that the administration desires to avoid.

Fine Weather For Series. By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, Oct. 3.—Ideal weather conditions will prevail in New York during the first few days of the world series, weather bureau officials said today. "Fair weather with moderate temperature" is the prediction for tomorrow.

State Bank Call.

MITCHELL ADOPTS EUROPEAN PLAN

Use of Automobile by Commercial and Other Travelers Causes Hotel to Adapt Itself to Promiscuous Eating Hours.

The Mitchell House in this city has adopted the European plan and has abandoned the American plan under which it has been operated since it was built many years ago. Notices of the new plan have been posted in the hotel, and the dining room service has been discontinued for everyone except employees of the hotel.

The increasing automobile traffic and consequent change in the habits of transient guests is responsible for the change of plan at The Mitchell. Formerly, traveling men and other transients were compelled to make their plans coincide with railroad time tables, and there were practically no arrivals or departures at the hotels except around train time. Now, however, transients, both traveling salesmen and tourists, arrive and depart at hotels at practically every hour of the day and night.

Commercial travelers with few exceptions now travel by automobile and adapt their hours to conform with the convenience of customers, with the result that few of them are at the hotels during the hours usually set apart for breakfast, dinner and supper. During such hours the commercial travelers generally are speeding from one village to another and the increasing number of wayside restaurants and tea rooms throughout this section of the state enables them to get their meals at any hour which suits their convenience. The same condition as regards restaurants now prevails in Kingston, where until a comparatively short time ago, corresponding with the general adoption of the automobile, it was impossible to get anything to eat outside of the hotels except sandwiches which were served in the various cafes. While the cafes and sandwiches remain, the public generally patronizes restaurants where meals can be obtained at all hours. The use of the automobile has increased the hours for serving meals to the traveling public, and the meal hours of local residents who patronize hotels and restaurants also have changed considerably in the past few years.

The Mitchell always maintained an excellent table and for many years has been one of the most popular hostilities in this section of the state, particularly with commercial travelers, who many years ago formed an association which has met each winter for a reunion.

CONSTANTINE'S PALACE HIS JAIL

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Oct. 3.—The Greek revolutionary committee at Athens is keeping King George a virtual prisoner in the palace, it was reported from Belgrade today.

Advices direct from Athens said that recognition of the new Greek revolutionary regime by Great Britain and Belgium, is expected as the result of a visit paid to King George by the British minister to Greece, F. O. Lindley.

M. Zaimis has renounced the position of premier in the Greek provisional government, owing to ill health. An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Athens says that Minister of Home Affairs Krokidas probably will succeed M. Zaimis.

A section of the British press led by the Daily Express, is bitterly attacking Eleutherios Venizelos, former Greek premier, charging that he is trying to induce the British to insist upon retention of Thrace by Greek troops until the Near East peace conference is concluded, "thus hoping to provoke war between Turkey and England." The Daily Express asserts that "Greece would then attempt to regain the territory she has lost behind the British screen."

Downing street officials resent these press attacks. A formal statement was issued saying that Venizelos is the friend of the Allies and that the Allies hope his influence will aid in settling the Thracian problem.

Venizelos conferred with Lord Curzon, British foreign secretary, and planned to leave tonight for Paris to see Premier Poincare, but suddenly postponed his trip indefinitely without explanation.

Woman's New Era League.
The Woman's New Era League of the Elmendorf Street Church will meet in the chapel on Wednesday at three o'clock. A paper on "Spanish Speaking People in the United States" will be read by Mrs. George Hendricks. Mrs. Peter Bukey will lead the devotions. A social hour will follow.

Curfew At 8 P. M.
Curfew now rings at 8 o'clock instead of 9 p. m., the change having been made Sunday evening, October 1. The usual number of small boys whose parents do not object will be seen on the streets, however.

DILY TONGUED SALESMEN
TRIM SAUGERTIES PEOPLE.

Saturday night two itinerant dispensers of various articles, arrived at Saugerties and parked themselves on Partition street and on Main street. Snake oil, razors and jewelry of all descriptions were among the articles for sale. These gentlemen were of the smooth tongue species who have the propensity of literally drawing the money from the pockets of their auditors. These men worked the "You trust me, and I trust you" game, passing out articles for a dollar, saying the money was to be refunded later. They worked their well oiled tongues and shifted the conversation to different lines, which attracted the greatest amount of attention and the refund money was forgotten. After getting rid of their wares they produced a roll of bills which they had easily accumulated and holding it up said, "If you had this roll what would you do?" Someone in the crowd said "Put it in my pocket." "Well," said he of the slippery tongue, "that's what I'm going to do. Good night." Then they departed to parts unknown.

PROHIBITION AGENTS
RAID CRAWFORD FARM.

According to the New York Times of today, seven agents who had been sent by Prohibition Zone Chief John D. Appleby on Saturday afternoon to raid a farm house near Crawford "in Ulster county," reported the seizure of two stills, besides twenty-five gallons of "jungle," thirty gallons of applejack and 150 gallons of fruit mash in process of fermentation. Ernest Haag, said to be the owner, received a summons to appear before Commissioner Hitchcock in this city, the Times adds.

Crawford is in Orange county near the boundary line between Ulster and Orange counties. No news of any seizure in the town of Shawangunk which adjoins the town of Crawford, has been received here.

THE TEST.

Within the next two months women will determine whether they were sincere in their desire for the ballot, and the testing grounds will be the polls. If they take advantage of their opportunity to cast their ballots they will prove they were sincere in their desire for equal suffrage, but if they fail to do so there can be no denying that they treated the subject as a fad; something to play with for a while and then forget.

Women today have the same responsibility resting upon their shoulders relative to governmental affairs as men. They are citizens with every right possessed by men, and while they must agree that they have every right they cannot overlook that with that right there is a responsibility. Now it is no longer a question of privilege, but it is a very definite question of responsibility. This they cannot avoid, and if they do not measure up to the responsibility it is for them to answer.

For two years Governor Miller has been generous with his time and attention to recommendations of women and has put on the statute books more laws urged by women in the interest of women and children than any other governor in the history of the state. Relative to what the governor has done for women and children is by no means just talk. Facts are available and have been enumerated repeatedly. Approval of what the governor has done has not been advertised by partisan organizations, but, on the contrary, it has been publicly endorsed by organizations and individuals not affiliated with either of the dominant political parties.

Women this year have all the responsibilities of men and there is no doubt as to their assuming such responsibilities. Fortunately the women in rural communities, being zealous this year for the renomination and reelection of Governor Miller, will do their part in making victory certain. It is more difficult for women in rural districts to get to the polls than it is for women in cities, but loyal women of the rural districts know what will happen if Democratic women in cities go to the polls and Republican women in the country districts do not cast their ballots. Up-state women fully realize this, and it can be said that the rural communities never failed when a real duty was to be performed.

ALFRED E. SMITH.

Alfred E. Smith, formerly governor of New York state and a candidate for the same office, nominated by the Democratic convention of 1922, is a product of Tammany Hall. He always has been proud of this identity and has never failed to prove his loyalty to Tammany, which, as an organization, is responsible for affairs in New York city. According to what has been published relative to its finances, New York is the worst managed city in the United States. It is hopelessly in debt and is getting deeper every year.

Ordinarily this might not have anything to do with a candidate of the Democrats for governor, but, as to Smith, it has something to do with him definitely. He has not been just an ordinary member of Tammany. He has been one of the dictators of Tammany, particularly so from the day he was elected governor four years ago. Since then, notwithstanding his influence in Tammany, the rules of the organization have not changed, nor has there been any betterment in the conduct of the city's business.

While Governor one of his recommendations was compulsory health insurance. It will be remembered that when he was renominated two years ago compulsory health insurance was one of his suggestions that had to be abandoned by the Democratic organization because of its unpopularity. There were others just as unwise.

During his term of governor the increase in state expenditures was startling. There was every reason to believe that to continue a Tammany governor in office the finances of New York state would be in the same condition they are in New York city. There was no reason to expect otherwise, because the cost of state government under Smith had mounted to a figure that was startling. Seemingly the state was being Tammanyized, and it was only the election of Governor Miller that checked the advance. While there is nothing to indicate that Governor Smith, as a member of Tammany, did anything to improve conditions in New York city, there is just as much to prove what would have been done for up-state had he forced his commission to fix the price of milk. Had he accomplished this he would have proved that he did as much for one section as he did for another, which was nothing, absolutely nothing, and this is a record upon which he must go before the people.

Burroughs Nature Club Notes

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Can you recommend any books on wild flowers of the western regions?
2. Does a beaver make any nest inside its house?
3. We have so many of the purple-blackbirds in flocks on our fields. What is the way to get rid of them?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Will any bird attack the potato bug?
- Yes, the handsome rose-breasted grosbeak is very fond of these, as well as of June and grape vine beetles. In some sections the farmers call this bird the potato-bug bird. It is not a common bird and should be protected. Bob-whites are also splendid hunters of this beetle.

2. What makes lumps of gum on peach and cherry trees?
- This gum is thickened sap, an unnatural condition due to the tree's effort to slough off impurities in its wood, caused by boring of certain insects. The moths whose larvae do the injury belong to the family Sesidae, and are small, bright-colored creatures that work in hot sunshine.

3. Please tell where sable fur comes from. Also if its fur is not longer than mink and what is the natural color?
- Mink and sable both come from the same general order of animal, Mustelidae; but minks are classed with weasels, Putoria, while sables are grouped with martens, Mustela. Sable fur is softer than mink, the overhairs longer and silkier, and the under fur more delicate. Mink overhairs are stiffer, and this fur wears splendidly. It varies in color from dull yellowish brown to rich blackish-brown. The darker sables are more valuable. Real Russian sable comes from Muskele shibellina, the best pelts coming from Yakutsk, Kamcharka and Russian Lapland. American sable is really pine marten.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Dainty "Party" Or "Best" Frock.
3958—Cauton crepe or crepe de chine would be attractive for this style, but it is nice also for gingham and other cotton weaves. The skirt is joined to a long waisted underbody. The overblouse, caught up at the sides in soft folds under ribbon, is trimming or a motif or rosette, is slipped over the dress when worn. One may have both skirt and overblouse in straight or scalloped outline.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

BLOOMINGTON.

Bloomington, Oct. 2.—The Ladies' Missionary Society will hold their regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, October 12th of next week, at 2:30, at the home of Mrs. Seth Rowe. All the ladies that have mite boxes will please bring them and new members and visitors are always welcome.

Mrs. George Hoffman went on Friday to spend a few days with her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Tears of Walkkill.

Mrs. Mary Smith, who has been ill for the past week, is improving at this writing.
Mrs. Edward Lefever, who has been ill for some time under the care of Dr. Vrooman of Kingston, went on Sunday to a New York City Hospital, where she has gone for treatment. Her husband, Mr. Lefever and mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Relyea and Miss Margaret Snyder accompanied her by way of auto on Sunday afternoon. We wish her good luck and hope she will come back to us in much better health.

Mr. and Mrs. McClane who have been visiting the Misses Douglass sisters for nearly two weeks went on Monday to Kingston, where they will spend some time with relatives and friends.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon, at 2:30, at the home of Mrs. David Mowell of Creek Locks. All the ladies are invited to attend.

Benjamin Stokes and mother of Pleasantville, spent the week-end with Mrs. Ira D. Bush and family.

Christian Endeavor meeting at 7 o'clock. Topic, "The Folly of Procrastination." Eccl. 9:10. Leader, Samuel Callaway of Whiteport. An invitation is given to everybody to come.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith and George, Jr., of Kingston, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. Smith and family and on Sunday afternoon they called on Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rickard.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Terhune and mother and Mrs. M. Warner motored to Ohioville on Sunday afternoon, and called on Mr. and Mrs. H. Elliott.

Foolish Superstition.

Don't Temporarily With Constipation! Drive It Out of Your System!

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumpled, will give you permanent relief from constipation if it is eaten regularly. Every member of your family should eat Kellogg's Bran every day. The consistent use of Bran throughout the nation would eliminate nine-tenths of all sickness which can be blamed on constipation. Children grow strong and robust through eating Kellogg's Bran regularly. Eat at least two-tablespoons daily. Chronic sufferers should eat as much as necessary.

Physicians have long recognized the wonderful properties of bran and your physician will endorse the use of Kellogg's Bran for constipation. We guarantee that it will give permanent relief to the most stubborn cases if it is used regularly. Results will astound you! You will also find that Kellogg's

Bran will clear simply complexions and sweeten disagreeable breaths.

You should know Kellogg's Bran as a nature-food. It is one of the most delicious cereals you ever ate. Do not confuse it with "remedies" such as pills or cathartics which never can and never will give permanent relief from constipation. Kellogg's Bran is nature's corrector. It acts as a sweeper, cleansing and purifying and regulating, whereas pills and cathartics can give but temporary action at best. Bran never irritates or makes you uncomfortable!

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumpled, is used in thousands of homes in many kinds of foods as well as a cereal. It makes the best pancakes you ever ate. Use it in raisin bread, muffins, macaroons, gravies or in many other enticing ways. Your grocer has it.

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THIRTY BUTTERFLY WAYS

"Just because I'm known as the Painted Beauty," said the little butterfly, "it does not mean that all I have is beauty."

"No, I have good sense, too, and we have good sense in our family."

"Now I shall tell you something about myself and see if you do not agree that I am not only beautiful but that I belong to a wise family as well."

"In the first place, when I was a little egg my mother put me upon an everlasting flower where she had made her home. She pushed this little egg down so that it was almost hidden in the tiny hairs of the flower."

"I was green and yellow in color, but so carefully was I hidden that I doubt if any one saw me."

"Then in a few days I became a little caterpillar and I began to bite the hairy top parts of the flower off and made of them a little nest for myself by piling them up together."

"In that way I was safe from my enemies."

"I ate from the leaf then—in the part from which I had removed the hairs. You see how I made use of everything."

"You don't find that people make such use of everything as I do. Oh, no; I get the most out of everything."

"Then after I had a few days of eating such meals I began to moult. I was still safe from enemies though by reason of my nest."

"I kept this up for several weeks and later I made a nest of several leaves together, binding them by a silken thread which I made."

"Few people—in fact I do not believe any person could do that."

"When people want to bind something together or do up something they look around for some string or cord and they are quite lost if they don't find any."

"I don't actually mean they are lost as though they had lost their way, but they are quite beside themselves wondering what to do when they can't find cord or string and when they need it badly."

"But I am different!"

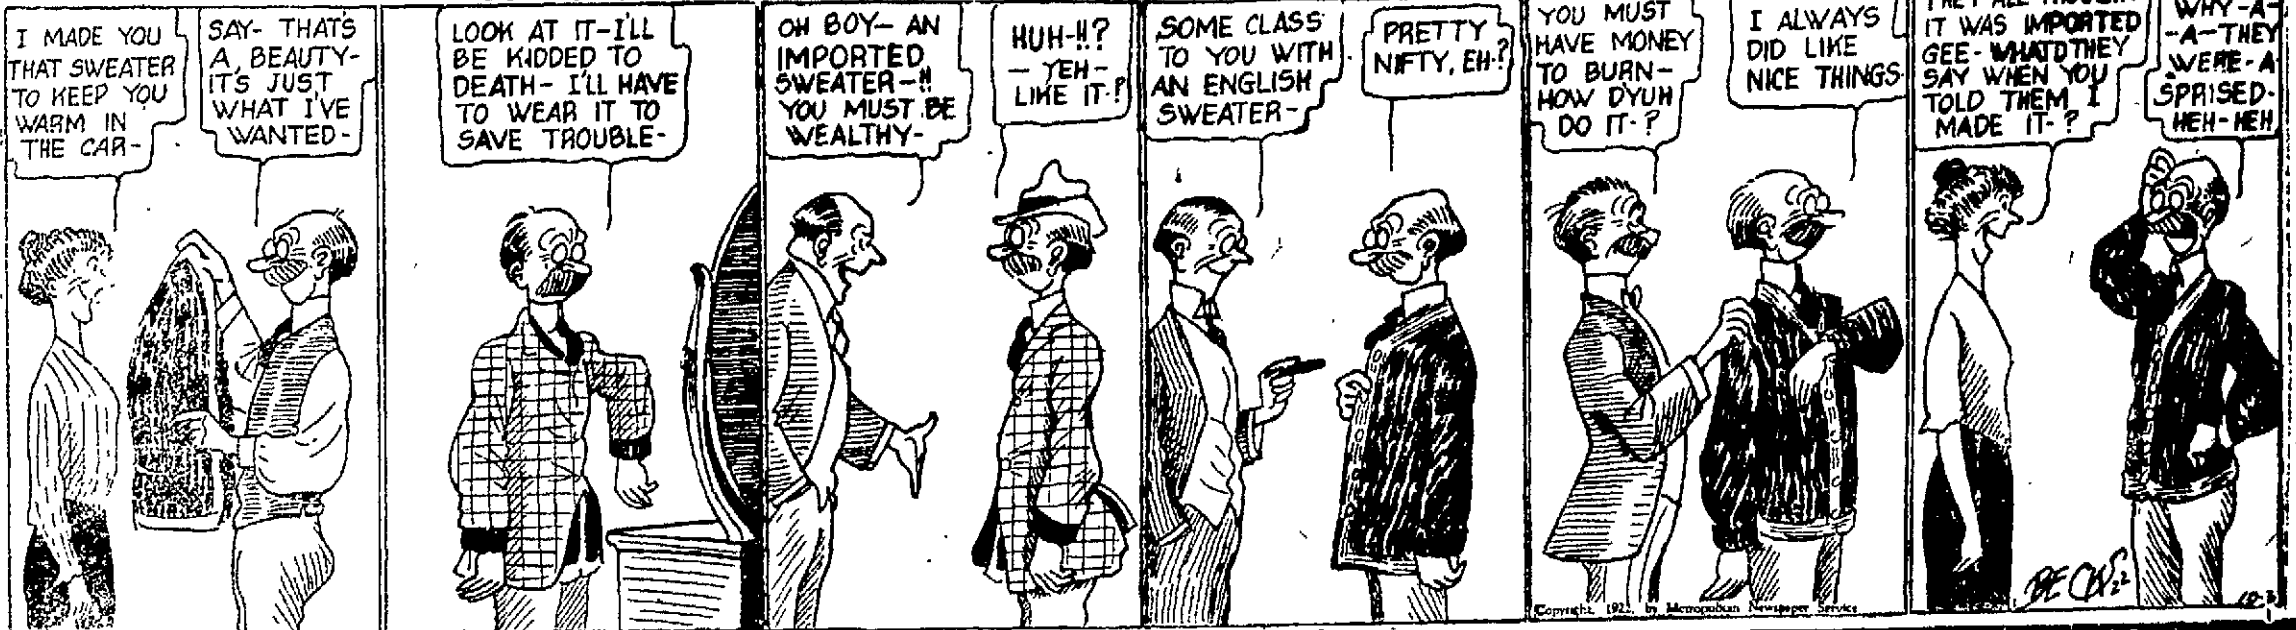

"I arranged the leaves, too, so that it was easy to put my house together!"

"Then I ate my inside walls. I didn't let anything go to waste. I made use of everything."

"Some people do nothing whatever with the insides of their houses. They are utterly useless. They don't take a nibble out of the walls."

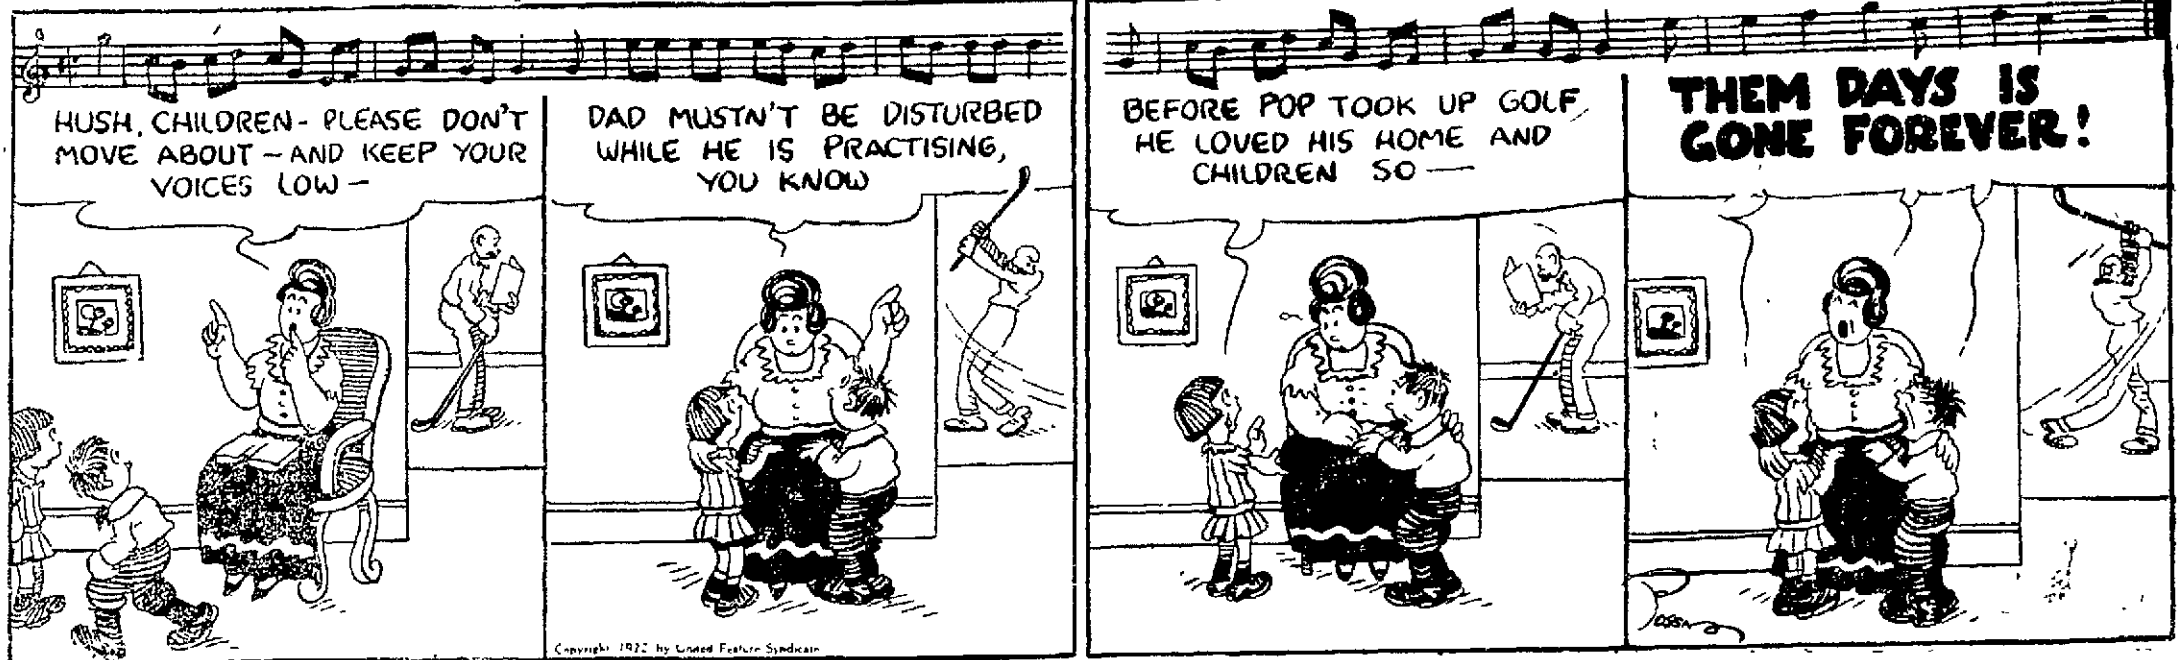

"No, they go around to the grocer's or the butcher's or they go out into

DO YOU LIKE PINEAPPLE?

Pineapple like other fruits are never better than when served and eaten fresh. But we are glad to have a few cans during the season when they are not on the market, to help out in the variety of our menus. As a salad or in combination with other foods, pineapple adds much to a dish. A cabbage salad becomes a dish in the highest class with a slice or two of pineapple added to it.

Pineapple Cake.—Make an angel food or any white cake baked in a sheet. Cut and put together in layers with a filling of whipped cream into which has been stirred shredded pineapple, sugar and flavoring to taste. The cake may be baked in layers or made into small cakes.

Pineapple Salad.—Arrange a slice of pineapple on lettuce, and on the slices place pieces of red pepper cut in the form of poinsettia petals. Fried hard-boiled egg may be used for the centers.

Pineapple Dessert.—Arrange on individual plates as many slices of pineapple. In the center of each slice place a cone of ice cream and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Whipped cream may be added to the cone, then the chopped nuts.

Frozen Pudding.—Make a custard of a pint of milk, three egg yolks, a cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt; strain, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and almond extract, then fold in the whites of the eggs and a cupful of whipped cream. Add chopped pineapple and candied cherries finely minced and freeze as usual.

Pineapple Fritters.—Stir grated pineapple into fritter batter, using one cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, a pinch of salt, two well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of milk. Beat well. Use a cupful of pineapple. Fry in small spoonfuls in deep fat.

Pineapple With Cheese.—Place a slice of pineapple in the center of head lettuce. In the center of the slice put a ball of seasoned cream cheese, sprinkle with a little of the rice of egg.

ADMIRAL HIGGINSON'S ADDRESS TO STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Arnold's Intrepid Naval Warfare on Lake Champlain Analyzed to Conclusion That it Contributed Largely to Capture of Burgoyne's Army at Saratoga.

Admiral Francis J. Higginson in an address before the annual meeting of the New York State Historical Society at Lake Mohonk last week on "Naval Operations During the Revolutionary War" said:

The naval operations during the Revolutionary War, so far as effecting the results of the war, seem to resolve themselves into two naval actions—one at Valcour Island, October 11, 1776, and the other between the French and British fleets, off Chesapeake Bay, on September 5, 1781.

Both these naval engagements resulted, directly and indirectly in the capture of a British army, that of General Burgoyne, at Saratoga, and that of Cornwallis, at Yorktown. History concerns itself, primarily, in recording victories and defeats, without always taking the trouble of tracing the cause of these events to their originating sources.

But, if the naval battle of Valcour Island, in October, 1776, caused a delay from the fall of '76 to the summer of '77, in the attempt of the British to isolate New England from the rest of the Colonies, and if that delay enabled the Colonies to gather a greater force, and present a stronger front in 1777, than they could have done in 1776, and if that increase of force, combined with other circumstances, led to the capture of Burgoyne's army on October 17, 1777, and further, if when the news of this surrender reached Paris it caused a hesitating government to enter the war on the side of the Colonies.

If this chain of events is true, and history says it is true, are we not justified in regarding the comparatively insignificant naval action at Valcour Island in October, 1776, as a little island of action from which sprang a might oak of consequences? A similar consequential effect of a battle happened in our own time, when the echo of the capture of New Orleans by Admiral Farragut in 1862, reached Paris, it prevented the recognition of the Southern Confederacy which Emperor Napoleon was on the point of doing.

Consequential effects of battle are sometimes greater than the action itself. The battle of Bunker Hill, which although a tactical defeat, sowing the sloping hillsides with British veterans, proclaimed to the Colonists that Colonial troops, behind breast-works and as long as their ammunition lasted were quite a match for British Regulars; a truth emphatically illustrated in later years by General Jackson at New Orleans in 1815. Bunker Hill was a battle which opened the eyes of the British officers to the work they had on hand and caused them to remark, "Damn those rebels, they will not flinch!" and it caused the rebels to remark, "We would like to sell the British a few more hills at that price."

Moreover, as the news of the battle filtered its slow way throughout the Colonies, it stimulated to activity the microbes of independence which had found a lodgment in many hearts; and this bloody sacrifice forced a quickening decision in wavering minds between an ancient and hereditary loyalty and disloyalty. The same effect which we saw repeated in 1861 when the firing upon our flag at Fort Sumter caused such a patriotic uprising in the North.

So, let us for a moment consider this naval battle at Valcour Island in 1776, which had, as I have shown, such an important influence upon subsequent events. The object of the battle was the naval control of the lake; that watery pathway leading to and from Canada which had borne upon its placid bosom the hostile Indian, the devoted missionary, the conquering explorer and the opposing armies of the French and the English.

In 1776, the British under General Carleton, were contemplating an invasion of New York, and in preparing his plans he has as his first problem the naval control of the lake, at that time in the hands of the Americans. The principle of naval control, previous to military operations, although well known to students of history, was for the first time coordinated and illustrated in its effects upon nations, by Rear Admiral Mahan in his "Influence of Sea Power Upon History," published in 1890.

I was fortunate enough to be one of the attendants of the Naval War College, when the lectures which formed the basis of this book were first delivered, and the naval officers then present, all recognized them as classics in Naval Literature; a recognition subsequently confirmed by world opinion.

In England, the book proved a powerful argument for the blue water, or as we say the big navy school. In its efforts to procure larger naval appropriations; and this principle of naval control was never better illustrated, than in the recent World War, when, as everybody knows, if Germany had had command of the sea, she would have won all her objectives. When Mahan's book reached the German emperor, he ordered a copy of it sent to every commanding officer of the German fleet, and not long afterward, at the exposition of Paris, he inscribed over the German pavilion, "The pathway of Germany lies over the sea."

In the United States, however, the book received scant notice and it was not until the relief of European approval reached our shores, that the American public awoke to its real value as a guide to naval policy.

In 1776, the sight is presented of two commanding generals, building with feverish haste, naval armaments, for the control of the lake, one, General Carleton, at St. John's, at the northern end of the lake, and the other, General Arnold, at Skeneborough, at the southern end of the lake. These construction depots were about sixty miles apart.

General Carleton, the British commander, had rather the harder task of the two, because in the Richelieu or Sorel river, between St. John's and Chambly, there were rapids, which prevented the passage of large keel ships from the St. Lawrence, to Lake Champlain; so that in spite of the fact that the admiralty had sent out three war vessels, specially adapted for lake navigation, these vessels had all to be taken to pieces, transported above the rapids, and reconstructed at St. John's. It is true that he had for this purpose, ship builders, sent out from England, and seven hundred picked seamen from the British fleet, and transports in the St. Lawrence river, but notwithstanding this skilled labor, it was not until October 9th, that he was ready to leave St. John's with his fleet.

Ten precious weeks had thus been lost by General Carleton in his naval preparations, weeks which as we know now, caused the wreck of his whole enterprise. Such is the value of the time factor in military operations.

The Americans, on the other hand, had nothing but a few sloops, and flat bottom boats; no money, no ship timbers, no naval stores, no skilled shipwrights; and they were obliged to cut their timber from the neighboring forest, and shape it into ships, and all this had to be accomplished, and the fleet had to be taken to the northern end of the lake fifty miles distant, before Carleton could get under way.

In this emergency, Washington, Schuyler and Gates turned instinctively to Arnold, not only for the great reputation he had won the year before, in conducting that Homeric expedition to Quebec, the liad of which is yet unsung, but also for the fact that Arnold possessed a nautical experience in his youth, which made him better fitted for the work in hand, than any other general at Washington's disposal.

Arnold had inherited from his father, a trading business, to the West Indies, and he became a ship owner, and merchant doing an extensive trade with the West Indies, sailing in his own ship as supercargo, directing the sale of his outward cargo, and the purchase of a return cargo. For his export trade, he often visited Quebec for the purchase of horses and cattle, which he shipped from there to the West Indies, thereby acquiring a knowledge of the country; which later did him good service.

Also, in his frequent expeditions to Canada, Arnold acquired a thorough knowledge of Lake Champlain, and Richelieu river; and so he was preeminently the man for the occasion; but what a part he had to perform in making bricks without straw! Tools, nails, shrouds, iron work, guns, munitions of war, must all be hauled from Albany with infinite labor, and it must all be done against time. If he could not get aloft before the British, all of his herculean labor would have been in vain. But thanks to his energy, two weeks before the British sailed, in his pride, Arnold had to oppose them, a fleet of fifteen vessels consisting of sloops, gondolas, galleys, mounting eighty-four guns; one hundred and fifty-two swivels, and all manned by eight hundred men.

The difference between a galley and a gondola (both new terms in naval nomenclature) seems to have been that the gondola was a flat bottomed construction, while the galley was a keel boat. Arnold preferred the galley as being more easily handled.

On the 3d of September, Arnold anchored his little fleet, five miles south of St. John's, from which advanced position he was forced to retire on the 23rd of September, to Valcour Island.

Carleton was not ready to leave St. John's until the ninth of October. On October 6th, Arnold received his last reinforcements, and in the action, on the 11th of October, his force consisted of two schooners, and a sloop, both broad-sided vessels, beside four galleys, and eight gondolas, with eighty-four guns, mounted in his fifteen vessels.

The British force which left St. John's on October 9th, besides consisting of the three masted "Indefatigable" had two schooners, the Maria and Carleton, a large gondola, the Royal Convert, the floating raider or battery, the Thunderer, and twenty gun boats, all manned by seven hundred men, from the British fleet, under regular naval officers, and accompanied by about seven thousand troops, in transports. The naval force was under command of Captain Pringle of the Royal Navy. General Carleton, himself, accompanied this naval force on board the Maria.

It was a joyous party. The psychology of a sailor is such that he always enjoys land operations. To sailors, anything on land is a lark, whether it is a fight or frolic. On shore the rigid discipline and minute routine of the man of war is necessarily relaxed, and it is a well known fact that in all of England's military expeditions, where they have included a naval brigade, particularly in the Crimea, that sailors have encountered all the hardships and dangers with a cheery optimism and gaiety, which has been quite an oasis in the surrounding army gloom and discontent. In fact, the serious part of a sailor's life commences at sea, when out of sight of land, and for him the land is made only for relaxation and pleasure.

Perhaps we would feel that way if we lived with the lid on all our emotions and actions, as is necessarily the case in naval life.

So, this regular naval force, sailing up Lake Champlain, with a fair wind, on the 11th of October, 1776, knowing their superiority, were eager to meet the Yankee fleet and Captain Pringle, walking the quarter deck with Carleton, gave expression to the buoyant and optimistic spirit, which permeated his whole command, by saying, "The rascals won't even give us a chance to burn powder." But Carleton, who had the year before tested the mettle of the "rascals" and their leader at Quebec, remarked conservatively, "wait and see."

They did not have to wait long. Sailing with a fair wind, and keeping along the shore of Grand Island, where Carleton supposed Arnold to be, they scanned the shores eagerly, but Arnold having withdrawn his forces to a bay on the west side of Valcour Island, and as Valcour Island from 100 to 180 feet high, his position was not discovered until the fleet had passed some distance to leeward so that when the British finally discovered him, they had to haul up on the wind and try to beat up to his position.

This was not so easily done, as under the lee of the high land, where Arnold was anchored, the northerly wind grew weaker and weaker, so that the masted vessels worked to windward slowly.

About 7 o'clock, however, the gun boats were enabled to sweep toward and take a position to the south of the American fleet, when they opened fire upon the Royal Savage, in which Arnold with a few galleys, had advanced a short distance in the front of his line. The British schooner Carleton soon after came to the assistance of the gunboats. The Royal Savage sustained the fire of the British vessels for some time, during which her mast was crippled and much of her rigging shot away. She then attempted to return to the line, but grounded near the southern point of the island and was abandoned by Arnold, who succeeded in reaching his line in safety. At night the British boarded the Royal Savage and set her on fire.

At half past twelve o'clock the Carleton and the gunboats had approached within musket shot of the American line, when the action became general and continued without cessation until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. During the engagement Arnold was on board the Congress, Waterbury on the Washington, and Colonel Wigglesworth on the Trombull. The Congress and the Washington suffered severely. The latter was hulled in several places, her main mast shot through and her sails torn to pieces. Waterbury fought bravely on the quarterdeck of his vessel, and towards the close of the action was the only active officer on board; the master and captain being severely wounded, the first lieutenant killed. The gondola New York lost all her officers except Captain Lee, and the gondola Philadelphia, Captain Grant, was so badly injured that she sank about one hour after the engagement. Arnold fought the Congress like a lion at bay, pointing almost every gun with his own hands, and cheering his men with voice and gesture. His vessel was hulled twelve times, and received seven shot between wind and water; the main-mast was injured in two places, the rigging cut to pieces and many of the men killed and wounded.

All this indicates warm work. And when you come to consider that on the British side the guns were aimed and pointed by expert gunners, trained to their work, and that on the American side they had only raw militia who had never worked guns on ship board before, you can see that a credible showing of Arnold's little force made against a superior enemy. The credit of this must go chiefly to Arnold himself, who had a marvelous gift of inspiring every man under him with his own desperate valor.

In this day's action, Arnold lost eighty out of five hundred men, and two ships totally destroyed, with nearly all the rest of them in a leaky condition.

On the side of the English the battle was sustained by the gunboats and the schooner Carleton and by a party of Indians who were landed on the island and main shore and kept up an incessant fire of musketry during the engagement. The English vessels suffered considerably. On board the Carleton eight men were killed and six wounded. Two of the gunboats were sunk and one was blown up with a number of men on board. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon Captain Pringle, who had made several unsuccessful attempts to bring his larger vessels into action, called off those engaged and anchored his whole fleet just out of reach of the American guns. The Thunderer lay at the right of the line, a little south of Garden Island, the schooner Maria on the left, the main shore, while the Royal Convert and the Indefatigable occupied intermediate positions. The Carleton and gunboats were anchored near and among the other vessels. By this arrangement, Captain Pringle hoped to prevent the escape of the American fleet during the night.

The outlook for Arnold, on the night of October 11th, was anything but a cheerful one, in fact it might be called desperate; and the probabilities of his destruction, on the next day, were great, particularly if there should be a shift of wind, which would enable the enemy to bear down upon his forces with all their broad-sided vessels. There was no possibility of escape by land, as the woods were full of British troops and Indians. Moreover, his ammunition was three-fourths expended, so that he could not have made much of a fight the next day. But Arnold, whom no adverse circumstances ever daunted, and who never knew when he was whipped, called a council of war, and decided upon an immediate retreat, during the night.

I find some ambiguity among historians as to how this retreat was made, whether through the enemy's lines or around their right or eastern flank, but the evidence seems to favor the latter movement, which, as the lake is five miles wide at that point, and unguarded, seems the safest route to have taken.

So at seven o'clock in the evening, Colonel Wigglesworth got the Trombull under way, and bearing around the north end of Valcour, directed his course towards the upper end of the lake, passing outside of the British line. The Trombull was soon followed by the Enterprise and Lee, with the gondolas; and about ten o'clock, Waterbury started in the Washington galley, followed closely by Arnold in the Congress. In this order, with a light at the stern of each vessel, the fleet passed to Schuyler Island about twelve miles distant, where they arrived early the next morning.

On examination, Arnold found two of the gondolas too badly injured to repair. These he sank near the island, and having fitted up the other boats as well as his limited time and means would permit, again set sail for Crown Point.

While Arnold was repairing his vessels, the British fleet weighed anchor and commenced beating up the lake in pursuit; and the wind blowing gently from the south. Early on the morning of the 13th, the American fleet was off the Bouquet river, and the British lay a little above Schuyler Island. Arnold now had the wind in the south, while a fresh northeast wind, blowing in the broader part of the lake, favored the English commauder, who brought up his leading vessels soon after the former had passed Split Rock. On this occasion, Captain Pringle led in person in the Maria, followed by the Indefatigable and Carleton. The Maria and Indefatigable at first attacked the Washington, which was too much shattered to keep up with the rest. The Washington struck after receiving a few shots. The two vessels then joined the Carleton, and for several hours, poured an incessant fire into the Congress, which was briskly returned. Arnold kept up a running fight until he arrived within ten miles of Crown Point, when he ran the Congress and four gondolas into a small creek, and having removed the small arms, burned the vessels to the water's edge. In this action, the Congress lost her first lieutenant and three men. The escape from such an overwhelming force seems miraculous.

The only vessels taken by the enemy were the Washington, and the gondola Jersey. The English loss, according to American accounts, must have been over one hundred.

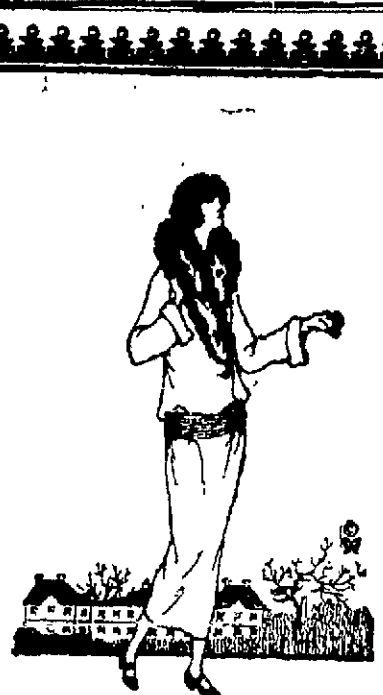

After leaving the Congress, Arnold's troubles were not entirely over, for he had ten miles of tangled wilderness, between him and Fort Ticonderoga. A wilderness full of savages, eager for scalps. All of these dangers Arnold succeeded in evading, and with ninety survivors of his former hope, he arrived safely at Fort Ticonderoga, on October 15th, with the British only three miles away.

Thus ended these three glorious days of battle, in October, 1776. Our American Leonidas returned from his Thermopylae, with his shield, not on it. The American forces abandoned Crown Point on October 15th, and returned to Fort Ticonderoga where Gates was prepared to resist the English advance. General Carleton occupied Crown Point after the Americans had left.

There was one incident in this battle which is pleasant to contemplate, and which shows like the poppies on the blood stained fields of Flanders, that the flowers of humanity may sometimes flourish amidst the carnage of war, and which is in pleasing contrast to the human outrages with which we were shocked during the late World War.

Immediately after the action of the 13th, Sir Guy Carleton gave orders for his surgeons to treat the wounded prisoners with the same care they did his own men. He then directed all the other prisoners to be brought on board his ship, where he treated them to a drink of grog, praised the bravery of their conduct, regretted that it had not been displayed in the service of their lawful sovereign, and offered to send them home to their friends, on their giving parole that they would not again take up arms against Great Britain until they should be exchanged. On the 14th, Captain, afterwards Sir James Craig, accompanied the prisoners to Ticonderoga, where he dismissed them on parole. The generous manner in which they had been treated filled the prisoners with the highest emotions of gratitude, and they returned proclaiming the praise of the British general. The feelings and sentiments expressed by these men were such that it was not considered safe to allow them to land or to converse with the American troops. They were therefore sent forward to Skeneborough the same night.

Whether actuated by humanity or the action to any third degree examination of motives, for, to the recipients of General Carleton's generosity, who were sent to their home firesides, instead of to a British prison ship, the motives for their enemy's forces.

From Washington and Schuyler Arnold received congratulatory letters. In short, this naval battle compares favorably with such classics as the battle between the Bon Homme Richard in command of John Paul Jones and the English Frigate Serapis under Captain Pearson, where Paul Jones, with his vessel almost a wreck, when asked by Captain Pearson if he had struck his colors, made that well known reply, "I have not begun to fight yet." For with that English classic the action between the Revenge bearing the flag of Vice Admiral Sir Richard Grenville, and a fleet of fifty-three ships, in which Grenville dying of his wounds, refused to surrender, and which mannyson immortalized in the following vigorous lines:

"And the sun went down, and the stars came out far over the summer sea,
But never a moment ceased the fight of the one and fifty-three.
Ship after ship, the whole night long, with her battle thunder and name,
Ship after ship, the whole night long, drew back with her dead and her shame.
For many were sunk, and many were shattered, and so could fight us no more.
God of Battles! Was ever a battle like this in the world before?"

The spirit of these heroes is interchangeable with that of Arnold.

The glory of this so-called naval action at Valcour Island belongs entirely to the army and is unique in the fact that it was fought entirely by officers and soldiers of the army, who were lifted from a purely military to a naval plane of action by Arnold's genius and contagious zeal, and knowing the poor tools he had to work, he showed his wisdom and knowledge of human nature in selecting a battle ground where the enemy was between him and his line of retreat, so that there was no chance for the desertion in the presence of the enemy which, under the slack conditions of discipline at that period, was common enough and which moved Washington greatly, as is shown in his letters to governors of colonies.

If it is permissible to penetrate behind the darkness and gloom in which Arnold by his monumental treasure closed his career, and to gaze upon the bright sunshine of his early efforts with the ardent patriotism and contagious enthusiasm which he gave to the Revolutionary cause at its commencement, one may, perhaps, be pardoned in dropping a silent tear of regret that a life of so much promise ended so disastrously; and in trying to comprehend the psychology of such a character one cannot resist the conclusion that with such complexes as a monumental egotism and self-esteem and a highly sensitive and proud temperament, that his mental attitude towards influences was largely emotional, and that the current of his patriotism, while strong, was of no great depth. We have all, perhaps, encountered men of like personalities, capable of great good or evil, according to the influences of the moment.

CONTEST BONUS IN LEGION ELECTION

Administration Supporters to Make It Issue in Election of National Commander to Succeed Mac Nider.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, Oct. 3.—A big drive by administration supporters to kill the so-called soldiers' bonus issue by the election of a new national commander opposed to adjusted compensation for ex-service men at the American Legion national convention at New Orleans two weeks hence, was well under way today. Hanford Mac Nider, the present national commander, and his aides in the unsuccessful fight for the bonus at the recent session of congress, declared that the issue would unquestionably be "fought all over again" at the New Orleans gathering.

Col. Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, and a World War veteran, who was renominated as Delaware's representative on the legion's national committee, is expected to figure conspicuously at New Orleans among those urging that the position of President Harding in vetoing the soldiers' bonus bill be sustained by the convention. In addressing the convention of the Delaware department of the legion at Wilmington while the bill was still before congress, Miller declared it had "resulted in placing the ex-service men of the country in a false light before a great number of their fellow citizens for whom they fought."

The anti-bonus forces in the New Orleans convention are depending for a great addition to their ranks from the delegates from the southern states, where opposition to the bonus has developed because of what is described as the proposed "distribution of a largesse among negro ex-service men." The argument is being advanced by anti-bonus speakers in the south that the payment of a bonus to the negro ex-soldier would cause him to suspend his labor in the cotton field and tobacco plantation "until his money was all spent."

Mac Nider and his associates said today they were going to New Orleans well prepared for a "hot fight." Leading bonus advocates in and out of congress are being urged to address the convention and Senator McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Fordney of Michigan, chairman of the house ways and means committee, as joint authors of the bonus bill the president vetoed, have been invited to speak there in behalf of bonus legislation.

The stand taken by the convention on the bonus question will be closely watched by political leaders and observers of both the Republican and Democratic parties in anticipation of the possible effect it may have on the November congressional elections. Great importance was attached by some administration senators to the kind of new national commander the convention will select as a result of the expected battle between the pro-bonus and anti-bonus delegates to it.

SERIES TICKET SCALPERS HAVING UNPLEASANT TIME

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Oct. 3.—The war against ticket scalpers for the World Series is on. As the fans lined up at the local baseball offices for reserved tickets, detectives coursed along the lines and any time they recognized a scalper, the gentleman in question was given the good and highly braking air. This happened enough to leave many of the scalpers without an adequate supply, one of them going so far as to try to bribe a clerk at a recognized ticket brokerage.

Even the unreserved sections will not be overlooked by the officials. As each ticket is bought, the day of the game, the purchaser will be required to enter the grounds immediately. This will reduce ticket scalping of unreserved seats to a minimum.

INVEST WISELY

The accompanying advertisement is reproduced here and at our own expense because it sets forth so clearly the very points we have endeavored to drive home in connection with our First Mortgage 6% Gold Bond offering. The habit of buying public utility securities—at least those of the Central Hudson System of Companies, IS getting hold of investors in this section. Already, over 2,500 customers and residents of the Valley have purchased bonds of this issue and more names are being added to the list every day.

The Scotchman's Heaven

It is the custom, time honored, to approach investment matters in a grave and serious vein, and so reflect the solidity of the securities offered.

But it is the exception that proves the rule, and even in so solid a field as the financial, there are exceptional investments offered.

To those who are Scotch by purse (if not by birth) the securities of the Light and Power companies of America should appeal strongly, offering as they do maximum safety and maximum return, and this is paradoxical only until the reasons are given.

First of all, we haven't as a nation the Public Utility Security buying habit, just as before the war we hadn't the Government Bond buying habit—and habit, imitation, (merit aside) plays a big part in security sales, just as it does in the clothing business.

Wise ones are just beginning to discover that the utility has something to offer in its securities that even from a banking standpoint is about air-tight.

First, partnership in a basically necessary service to society—power and light. (Making for vitality of investment.)

Second, an industry under public control through State commissions—an insurance of safe management.

Third, a potential future market twice as big as the present—securing and assuring future earning power.

It is significant—and any statistical chart proves it—that prices, strikes, inflations and deflations and all the other ills to which securities are supposed to be subject, seem to miss the Public Utility.

Remember this when you read what they offer the investor—in the percentage column—today.

NEW ROAD MACHINE AT UNIVERSAL PLANT

Portable Outfit Sent to Hawaiian Islands.

One of the newest road hoes and stone rakes intended for work on dirt roads in towns has just been received by the Universal Road Machinery Company of this city. This machine which has recently been invented is an ingenious arrangement of road scarifier, hoe and stone rake. The scarifier first digs up the road, then the hoe closes the ruts and smooths the road and finally the stone rakes carry the stones to the side of the road, placing them in a windrow.

The machines are manufactured in Unadilla, N. Y. and already have been tried out in various townships through the state giving the utmost satisfaction. In the town of Jefferson, the town officials were given a thorough demonstration last week and were so well pleased with the machine that they placed their order for two at once.

These machines may be seen at the plant of the local company on Emerson street.

Recent shipments by the Universal were a 10 by 13 portable crusher with 30 ton portable bin screens and elevator to the township of Hunter, Greene county, a 9 by 16 portable outfit for the Hawaiian Islands, consigned to the Honolulu Iron Works; a 36 in. by 12 foot roller screen for Baltimore and a similar one for contractors in Alabama.

Since keeping reinforced concrete culvert pipe in stock, the Universal have sold three carloads during the past two weeks to neighboring townships and have another carload on the road which will arrive this week.

BOYLES EAMS IN FINE SHAPE FOR FIRST WORLD SERIES GAME

With All Reserved Seats Taken, Good Weather Assured and Fans Non-Partisan, There is Little Agitation Over Result—Nehf to Oppose Bush.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Oct. 3.—Broadway and its network of feeding arteries, otherwise known as the Roaring Forties, has begun to run something of a temperature with the first game of New York's private little big series for the world championship a matter of 24 hours away. Thousands of visitors from points west, south and north are parading the famous thoroughfare, standing in hotel lobbies and commencing themselves as might suit their convenience.

The annual convention of the American Bankers' Association has cast 10,000 members on the life stream of the town. When not engaged in the problems of finance, they stand around and discuss the respective chances of the Giants and Yankees. Old timers of the ball field are here, which is nothing new. They always rally around a world series.

Fans from other sections of the country, the incurable specimen who must be in at the death, baseball correspondents armed with typewriters and a determination to miss nothing and the ordinary transient guest helps to swell the throng.

A warm, almost mid-summer sun shines down on all. It is supposed, according to the weather bureau, to spread its stuff again tomorrow and probably Thursday, with the possibility that showers and cooler weather may come later in the week.

The rest of the details have been swept up in a neat, tidy pile. No reserved tickets are on hand in either office and only the 22,000 unreserved seats for each day remain. These will be disposed of the day of each game and purchasers will be required to enter the park immediately—an honest attempt to break up speculation.

The teams will engage in their last workout today. This doesn't mean much, if anything. Both are in first class condition and nothing they can do in the meantime will bring a flint edge to their form before game time tomorrow.

It is a virtual certainty that McGraw will start Art Nehf, his curve ball left-hander, against Joe Bush, the Yankee last ball ace, in tomorrow's inaugural Nehf created a world series record in holding the Yanks to 13 hits in three games last year. The chances are against him repeating, particularly since he has had an indifferent season. Bush has enjoyed his most prosperous campaign since coming to the big time in 1912.

There is little evidence of partisanship among the fans. Manhattan promises to go out and look at the thing but apparently wishes to notify one and all concerned that it is compelled to become neither agitated nor enthusiastic. The players of both teams are hardly inimical, either. They are more than friendly; all little pals together, in fact.

However, the future is a shy, elusive animal. According to official edict, Bill Klem and Barry McCormick of the National League staff, and "Buck" Owens and George Hildebrand of the American League, will umpire the series. The Yankees and Hildebrand are on terms of perfect understanding. It is one of those beautiful friendships that seeks expression by saying "I with heel-prints. Let Hildy pull an adverse decision or so and the Yanks will want to lick him and the Giants as well.

The betting, as anticipated, has dropped to six to five on the Yankees and in some cases to even money. Most of the boys, however, manage to keep their hands in their pockets and their tongues between their teeth.

Judge Landis, who has taken up his headquarters at the Commodore, again wishes to assure prospective seat occupants that plenty of seats can be purchased at the Polo Grounds each day. All you have to do is to park yourself early and avoid your neighbor's pocket.

The 1-know-when Club is gathering delegates every hour. Members already on hand and taking a leading part in the meetings are

Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates and a great outfielder; Wilbert Robinson, fat, funny and fifty, torn between his friendship for John McGraw and "Cap" Hueston; George Washington Grant, president of the Braves; Pat Moran and "Garry" Herrmann, of Cincinnati; Jack Dunn, who thinks McGraw likes Jack Bentley better than he does $100,000; Hans Robert, ex-Giant, ex-Phil, ex-Red; Fred Jacklitch, so energetic he used to warm up pitchers in a rocking chair out in the bull pen; Dan Brouthers, champion hitter of a past generation, and many others.

They do the series according to their affiliations, present and past, and each can give you a perfectly plausible reason why either the Giants or Yanks can and will win.

Huggins and McGraw, the rival managers, have been hiding out, more or less. If you can do some open field running through a squad of office attaches, you can have a word with either at their respective offices. Otherwise John and the worthy Miller are not for public view.

Huggins is a bit reticent about expressing his opinion of the outcome. He says he thinks the Yanks will win, basing his prediction upon the commendable condition of Bush, Shawkey and Hoyt, his first string pitchers, and the fact that the estimable Mr. Ruth is bringing his frank anatomy to the series intact. Mr. Ruth overlooked that detail last year.

McGraw is a trifle more positive in his views. Nehf, Scott, McQuillan and J. Barnes, he says, will pitch good ball and the Giant hitters, consulting the most effective offensive machine in baseball, will get to the Yankee pitchers and blast out a victory.
